Brand Identity & Editorial Guide

Writing that shapes the world.

The brand at a glance

The Moveee Literary is an international literary publication built around one conviction: literature can alter how people see themselves, one another, and the world.

Writing that shapes the world.

BRAND ESSENCE

Stories. People. Worlds.

A literary institution with global curiosity, rigorous taste, and a distinctly human sensibility.

MASTER TAGLINE

Writing that shapes the world.

Campaign lines can evolve. The institutional tagline does not.

Official tagline

Writing that shapes the world.

This is the master brand line. Other phrases are campaign language, not competing taglines.

- For writing that shapes the world.
- For what stays.
- Send us what stays.
- For the sentences that linger.
- The Moveee is turning the page.
- Different voices. A wider world.
- A more human tomorrow.
- Good stories live longer.
- Writing that moves the world. - merchandise/campaign use only.

The central idea

*Literature changes the way people see themselves, one another, and the world.
The Moveee Literary exists to find, nurture and publish the writing capable of doing that.*

Brand essence

Stories. People. Worlds.

Brand belief

Stories can change people. And in changing people, change the world.

Brand ambition

To become a globally respected home for exceptional literature and one of the most important platforms for discovering the defining writers of a new generation.

Mission

To discover, publish and champion exceptional fiction, poetry, essays, conversations and translated literature from writers across the world, with particular attention to voices, communities and perspectives historically overlooked by traditional literary institutions.

Vision

To help build a more human world through literature.

The long-term ecosystem:

- The publication
- The Prize
- The Salon
- Masterclasses
- Print editions
- Books
- Fellowships
- Merchandise
- Festivals
- The Moveee Library

The editorial promise

Every piece published by The Moveee Literary should answer at least one of these questions:

Does this make us see something differently?

Does the language stay with us?

Does it reveal a world we have not encountered before?

Does it complicate something we thought we understood?

Does it make us feel more deeply?

The standard is not simply: Is this competently written? The Moveee standard is: Why this piece? Why this writer? Why now?

Positioning & audience

The Moveee Literary sits at the intersection of literary excellence, cultural curiosity, global discovery and beautiful design.

Reference territory

- The New Yorker - cultural authority
- The Paris Review - literary prestige
- Granta - international discovery
- The New York Review of Books - intellectual seriousness
- A24 - visual confidence and cultural desirability

Positioning statement

The Moveee Literary is an international literary publication discovering and publishing bold, beautifully crafted writing from across the world - stories that illuminate lives, challenge assumptions and remain with readers long after the final sentence.

Core reader

Curious, culturally engaged, aesthetically conscious and internationally minded. Writers, readers, editors, academics, artists, journalists, filmmakers, designers, publishing professionals, students, book collectors and culturally curious professionals.

Core writer

If they publish me, it means something.

Brand personality

Intelligent

Never unnecessarily academic.

Elegant

Never ornamental for ornament's sake.

Curious

Interested in worlds beyond its own.

Human

Emotion before institutional jargon.

Discerning

Warm toward writers, rigorous about literature.

Cosmopolitan

African-rooted but never geographically restricted.

Confident

No desperate declarations of prestige.

Do not say “we are prestigious.” Publish and design in a way that makes people conclude it themselves.

Brand voice & language

The voice should sound like an editor who reads widely, thinks deeply, speaks beautifully and does not waste words.

Precise + lyrical + restrained + curious + assured

Moveee copy should sound like this

Send us what stays.

For the sentences that linger.

The world is full of stories we have not heard yet.

Somewhere, someone is writing the story we will remember.

For writing that shapes the world.

Good stories live longer.

Not this

“We are super excited to announce that submissions are officially open!!!”

Instead:

The doors are open. Send us what stays.

Writing principles

01 – Say less

Luxury and prestige depend partly on restraint. “Issue One is open.” is often stronger than a paragraph announcing it.

02 – Prefer images to abstractions

Not “literature has transformative potential.” Better: “Some stories change the room after they are read.”

03 – Write sentences worth remembering

The social copy itself should demonstrate the literary standards of the publication.

04 – Do not overuse adjectives

Avoid constantly describing work as exceptional, brilliant, groundbreaking, incredible, world-class or prestigious.

05 – Speak globally without sounding generic

Replace repeated “voices from around the world” phrasing with fresher language such as “Stories can begin anywhere.”

Vocabulary

WORDS TO INHABIT

stories · sentences · voices · worlds · language · memory · imagination · culture · human · discovery · literature · writers · readers · ideas · pages · enduring · curiosity · craft · translation · possibility

USE SPARINGLY

prestigious · best · leading · world-class · incredible · amazing · disruptive

Visual identity

The visual world should feel like an old literary institution meeting contemporary global culture. Not vintage cosplay. Not corporate minimalism. Not Instagram-template design.

INTER

FUNCTIONAL METADATA

ISSUE 01 / 2026

Hierarchy

- Level 1 - Hero statement: Didot/Bodoni-style display serif
- Level 2 - Emotional emphasis: editorial italic
- Level 3 - Supporting copy: Garamond
- Level 4 - Metadata: Inter uppercase with generous tracking

Give the typography room. Negative space is part of the identity.

Logo system

Recommended master lock-up

moveee

L I T E R A R Y

Core versions

- Primary - black wordmark / oxblood dot / ivory background
- Reverse - ivory wordmark / gold or oxblood dot / black background
- Monochrome - all black or all white when production requires it

Never

- Stretch or distort the logo
- Add drop shadows
- Place it inside arbitrary boxes
- Change the dot colour randomly
- Apply gradients
- Crowd it with copy
- Rotate it
- Use different typefaces for LITERARY

Signature graphic motif

The curved oxblood line is an ownable visual asset. It can represent a sentence, a journey, a thread, a turning page or a connection between worlds.

A sentence. A journey. A thread.

Use it sparingly across posters, website transitions, stationery, print editions and packaging. The long-term goal is recognition even when the masthead is absent.

Illustration & human representation

Illustration should be the dominant visual language. It should feel like editorial art, not clip art.

Preferred illustration style

- Flat or lightly textured editorial illustration
- African and international human figures
- Elegant silhouettes and expressive lines
- Stylised rather than photorealistic treatment
- Subtle paper grain
- Restrained palette
- Editorial symbolism rather than decoration

Preferred subjects

Readers · writers · lovers · families · travellers · rooms · cities · windows · hands · faces · letters · birds · roads · maps · flowers · ordinary domestic moments

Human representation

The visual world should naturally include people from Africa, Asia, the Caribbean, Europe, Latin America, the Middle East and diasporic communities - across ages, genders, appearances and ways of life. Diversity should be lived, not constantly announced.

Photography, texture & layout

Photography

Use sparingly: editorial portraits, writers in their environments, architecture, cities, culturally specific objects, literary events and documentary imagery. Avoid generic stock photography.

Texture

Use a subtle warm-paper or archival-paper grain. The objective is tactility, not nostalgia.

Layout philosophy

One thing must dominate.

Either the headline, the illustration, the portrait or the product - never all four.

- Wide margins
- Asymmetry
- Editorial tension
- Large empty areas
- Thin rules
- Small metadata
- One major visual anchor

Instagram system

Brand posts

Ivory backgrounds, large display serif, minimal illustration, oxblood accent.

Contributor announcements

Portrait or illustration. Writer name dominant. Genre/article title secondary.

Published work

Headline + commissioned artwork. Avoid giant excerpt blocks on every card.

Quotes

Very sparse. One sentence. Large negative space.

Institutional news

Black or oxblood backgrounds can create contrast.

Merchandise

Product dominant. Almost no copy.

Prize

More ceremonial use of gold.

Create family resemblance, not a rigid template.

Editorial architecture

FICTION

Short stories and excerpts.

POETRY

Individual poems and portfolios.

ESSAYS

Literary, cultural and personal essays.

CONVERSATIONS

Interviews with writers, artists and thinkers.

IN TRANSLATION

Writing crossing languages.

NOTES

Short criticism, dispatches, letters and observations.

“Conversations” is preferred to “Interviews”: it is warmer, more literary and less transactional.

The Moveee Short Story Prize

Name

The Moveee Short Story Prize

Presented by The Moveee Literary

Prize visual language

- Moveee Ivory
- Ink Black
- Oxblood
- A more prominent but still restrained Antique Gold
- Recurring symbol: a golden fountain-pen nib with subtle laurel detailing

Prize positioning

A search for the next unforgettable story.

Campaign lines

Somewhere, the next great story is being written.

We intend to find it.

One story. One writer. A wider world.

The world has not read your best story yet.

Sponsor co-branding

Sponsors should strengthen the institution without visually replacing it.

Preferred language

- Presented with [Partner]
- Supported by [Partner]
- In partnership with [Partner]

Logo placement

- Small
- Bottom-aligned
- Monochromatic where possible
- Visually subordinate to The Moveee Literary / prize mark
- Never a wall of logos

Sponsors fund the institution. They do not replace it.

Merchandise identity

Merchandise should look like literary objects people would buy even if they did not already know Moveee.

Tote bags

Commissioned editorial artwork. Minimal masthead.

Journals

Clothbound. Embossed The Moveee Literary. Inside cover: “For what stays.”

Mugs

Handmade-ceramic aesthetic rather than corporate mugs.

Clothing

Tiny front embroidery; commissioned art on the back.

Prints

Numbered artwork inspired by published stories.

Bookmarks

Beautiful excerpts from contributors.

Packaging

Recommended materials

- Cream tissue
- Oxblood stickers
- Black typography
- Selective gold foil
- Small editorial cards

Thank you for carrying literature into the world.

An order should feel considered and tactile - closer to receiving an art object than ordinary e-commerce.

Website

The homepage should feel like an online literary object, not a news portal.

Principle

Do not begin with ten competing menus. Let the masthead, artwork and one clear editorial proposition lead.

Institutional copy

Short bio

The Moveee Literary is an international publication for fiction, poetry, essays, conversations and translated literature. We publish writing that illuminates lives, challenges assumptions and stays with readers long after the final sentence.

Long institutional bio

The Moveee Literary is an international literary publication dedicated to discovering, publishing and championing exceptional writing from across the world. Through fiction, poetry, essays, conversations and works in translation, we seek writing that expands our understanding of ourselves and one another - work with emotional depth, intellectual curiosity and language that endures. We believe stories can change people, and in changing people, change the world.

Editorial masthead

- Founder / Publisher
- Managing Editor
- Fiction Editor
- Poetry Editor
- Essays Editor
- Translations Editor
- Conversations Editor
- Art Director
- Readers
- Contributing Editors
- Advisory Board

A visible, serious masthead materially shapes how writers and partners perceive the publication.

What Moveee must never become

The Moveee Literary should never feel like:

A content farm

An Instagram poetry page

A vanity publication

A lifestyle blog with literature attached

A résumé-building project for its editors

An endless submissions account

A graphic-design brand with no editorial substance

The beautiful graphics bring people through the door. The literature makes them stay.

The brand experience

This has been considered.

Every interaction should carry that feeling:

- The submission acknowledgement
- The rejection email
- The acceptance letter
- The website
- The copyediting
- Contributor payment
- The print edition
- Packaging
- Events
- Merchandise
- The prize ceremony

Even rejection should feel respectful enough that a writer wants to submit again. That is how literary reputation compounds.

Signature campaign language

BRAND

Writing that shapes the world.

DISCOVERY

For what stays.

SUBMISSIONS

Send us what stays.

PRIZE

The world has not read your best story yet.

PUBLICATION

Good stories live longer.

GLOBAL POSITIONING

Stories can begin anywhere.

PHILOSOPHY

Stories can change people. And in changing people, change the world.

COMMUNITY

Different voices. A wider world.

The perception goal

Five years from now, the desired reaction is not “some online magazine published me.” It is:

Moveee took my story.

Writers should want “Published in The Moveee Literary” in their bios. Publishers and agents should read the prize shortlist. The Short Story Prize should become something writers plan their calendars around. An Issue One contributor who later becomes famous should be remembered as someone Moveee published early.

The most valuable thing the brand can represent is taste.

When readers trust that something is worth their time because Moveee chose it, you have built the institution.
